ABOUT UNC CHAPEL HILL

The University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill is the nation's oldest public university, founded in 1789. The institution is consistently ranked among the best in academic quality, research, diversity, engagement and international presence, and it ranks 47th in the world according to The Times World University Ranking, and 5th Public University according to US News. The University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill is an excellent teaching and research institution and provides extensive library support for these central activities. The UNC campus has 16 libraries available to students. UNC's library system is the 20th largest in the United States and holds 3.85 million volumes and is also accessible online.

The University is in Chapel Hill, a sophisticated small town that's part of a larger and easily accessible Raleigh-Durham metropolitan area – an area that the U.S. Census recognizes as having the biggest gain of any metropolitan areas in the past ten years. With nearly 1.5 million people, the community offers a range of collegiate activities, professional activities, cultural events, and more.

ABOUT NEW MIND EDUCATION

Founded in 2011, New Mind Education has teamed up with leading universities, such as UNCC Chapel Hill, to turn the study abroad journey into a life-altering experience for both the students and their host university. The institution designs and operates integrated, on-campus programs that do more than create a comfortable environment for international students. New Mind empowers these young leaders. Their learning and cultural understanding stretches across the globe, helping them recognize their potential in a global economy and society.

As an accredited institution, New Mind Education partners with UNC to provide holistic support and a complete immersion experience to both UNC-GVSP semester and summer programs' students.

For GVSP students, there are specifically designed activities led by New Mind to address the following objectives: Career and graduate school support, academic and language proficiency development, and cross-cultural competence. The activities include but not limited to: extended orientation, services set up, one-on-one advising sessions, bi-weekly workshops, and field trips.

COURSE OFFERINGS

Whether you can join us at UNC for 5 weeks in the summer or a whole academic year, there is a variety of courses offered under the College of Arts and Science that you could choose from.

As the largest unit on campus, the College of Arts and Sciences forms the academic core of “the Carolina experience.” The college’s mission is to create new knowledge and discover innovative solutions to the world’s greatest challenges, to educate outstanding undergraduate and graduate students, and to encourage faculty and students to contribute meaningfully to North Carolina, the nation and the world.
