Detailed Syllabus Information

Course Subtitle	Law and Society in the Middle East
Language of the Course	English
Learning Methods	Listening and watching face-to-face/online class: Listening and watching a lecture, video, or demonstration, face-to-face or via online (e.g., attending a face-to-face lecture, watching an on-demand video) Reading: Reading books and academic papers (e.g., summarizing an academic paper, reading information on a website) Discussion: Learning through question-and-answer interactions and exchanges of opinions among students and between students and the instructor (e.g., pair/group discussion, online chat, one-on-one guidance for writing an academic paper)
Course Objectives	Middle Eastern countries have been witnessing extraordinary developments in their legal systems. Many countries are active actors in global developments and have become one of the world's leading financial and trade centers and/or preferred destinations for business, work, or tourism. On the other hand, Middle Eastern countries remain very "traditional" especially when it comes to issues relating to family law, women's and children's rights, fundamental freedoms etc. despite the various legal reforms that have taken place. This course aims to put all these developments into perspective and initiate students to the fascinating world of the Middle East. This course puts all these developments into perspective and initiates students to the fantastic world of the Middle East with all its complexities...and contradictions.
Learning Goals	1	Upon completion of this course, students will be expected to gain basic knowledge about the legal systems in the Middle East, their characteristics, as well as a general understanding of some hot issues in the region from the point of view of the interaction between Islamic law and modern law. Especially, students : 1. Understand the diversity of the legal systems in the Middle East and their characteristics
