 "Course of Media Class" are classes in which more than half of the classes are held in places other than classrooms by making advanced use of various media.
 Undergraduate students can include up to 60 credits in media class course as requirements for graduation.
 Even if this is not the case, we may hold classes using the media.

Detailed Syllabus Information

Course Subtitle	Applied Linguistics A
Language of the Course	English
Type of Class	Lecture Subject
Course Objective	This course is an introduction to the field of applied linguistics. It looks at language learning and teaching from pedagogical and research perspectives. In addition, it looks at how research findings can be applied into second (foreign) language classrooms. This course is designed for students who want to be future language teachers and those who are interested in the mechanism of second (foreign) language development. It will cover a range of topics related to second language acquisition. This course also serves as an introduction for postgraduate students doing their postgraduate studies in English (or undergraduate students who are planning to progress into postgraduate studies). It includes critical reading and analysis of literature, thoughtful and active participation in class discussions, delivery of individual and group presentations, and academic writing tasks.
Learning Goals	1. To demonstrate a basic understanding of the research field of applied linguistics 2. To critically read and analyse literature 3. To discuss and express ideas in English 4. To compose academic reports in English
Requirement / Prerequisite	Good English speaking and writing skills.
